CONTENT OF COURSE COVERED

This course is designed to give the police officer the ability to be understand and employ techniques in the ability to apprehend criminals before, during, and after the commission of a crime in the motor vehicle setting.

In block 1 the student will learn legal methods for identifying criminal vehicles based on responses to officer presence, how vehicles are used during the commission of a crime, and identifying optimal locations and the constitutional standards regarding legalities.

In block 2 the student will learn vehicle approach, passenger behavior, roadside interviewing techniques, body language and deception, and having a thorough understanding of what Reasonable Articulable Suspicion is vs. Probable Cause and knowing the legal approaches to both.

In block 3 we will analyze indicators of the motor vehicle itself to include a perspective in today's trends of how motor vehicles themselves are being in the commission of criminal offenses. The student will also learn the documentation and report writing associated with an effective arrest by using current case law and procedural guidelines.

Instructor: Robert Ferreiro began his career in 2007 when he was hired by a municipal police department in NJ. During his 12+ years of law enforcement experience, Ferreiro has made hundreds of arrests for narcotics and weapons offenses. He was previously a detective and also assigned to a criminal interdiction detail in which he and his partners were responsible for some of the largest self-initiated narcotics seizures in his agency's history. He is also a recognized Drug Recognition Expert (DRE). Ferreiro is fluent in Spanish and currently holds the rank of Patrol Sergeant.
